DISSERTATION

"The effect of forgiveness training on psychosocial factors in college age adults." A randomized wait listed design that recruited subjects who had an unresolved interpersonal grievance. The treatment group received a six-session training in forgiveness that blended a cognitive behavioral treatment with a positive emotion refocusing treatment. At post-test and follow-up the treatment group had significantly less anger, hurt and greater hopefulness, self efficacy and willingness to forgive than did the control group. Advisor: Carl E. Thoresen
Reading Committee: Kenneth R. Pelletier, William Tiller.

Awarded 2nd place in the 1999 Division 17 American Psychological Association Student Health Psychology Research Competition.
